Modernizing Learning at E.ON
Change at E.ON is happening on all fronts. Recently, the company also recognized its need to modernize learning and empower employees to take control of their own learning.

“Like most companies, we have the challenge of modernizing learning in a traditional industry,” says Sue Woods, Global Learning Media Expert at E.ON. “We want to encourage employees to take responsibility for their own learning and offer them more interactive, online methods. That’s an ongoing challenge, to motivate learners to go for what they want rather than to expect someone else to be in control of their learning.”

With the pressure in the energy sector, however, modernizing learning is a greater challenge for E.ON than it is for most companies.

“We’re in a market that is undergoing a lot of changes,” Woods continues. “We’re modernizing learning at a time when we have less money to spend on learning. We need to make sure that we get the most value out of everything we do.”

And that’s exactly what the Learning and Development (L&D) team at E.ON set out to do. To bring their employees’ learning into the digital age, they created an online HR platform where employees can find answers to their most pressing questions. Integrated into this platform is their new Learning Management System (LMS) with all their new learning resources. And embedded seamlessly into both platforms is getAbstract. Through these platforms, every employee in the company has access to getAbstract’s library of compressed knowledge – including thousands of book and video talk summaries.

Learning Anytime, Anywhere
In its quest to modernize learning, E.ON concentrated on encouraging its employees to learn anytime, anywhere. This is where getAbstract came into play.

“We’ve made getAbstract available to every employee. It’s a brilliant tool anyone can use to learn anytime, anywhere – whether... it’s using the mobile app, pdf or kindle,” says Woods. “It absolutely fits with our new learning culture. It helps everyone recognize that learning isn’t about a classroom course that you go away for; it’s about those few minutes you regularly fit into your day.”

E.ON adopted a 70-20-10 approach to learning: 70% on-the-job learning, 20% learning through others and 10% formal learning. getAbstract has supported the new culture by offering relevant content at the right time. Employees find getAbstract particularly useful as a promoter of informal learning because they can access information whenever and wherever they need it.

Change starts at the top: 2020 Leadership
At E.ON, change started at the top. The company invested in a 2020 Executive Leadership Program to help executives embrace their roles as leaders and encourage them to become the pioneers of change.

The Leadership Program includes three challenges: “Build Our Future,” “Lead Our Transformation” and “Shape Our Culture.” getAbstract helped maintain momentum and supported each challenge by providing curated content around topics like “Inspiring and Leading in Times of Change” and “Adaptive Leadership.” Additionally, the getAbstract discussion platform encouraged discussions and collaboration.

getAbstract and “The Change Cube”
With the energy transition moving at lightning speed, E.ON needed an efficient way to prepare employees for the company’s structural changes. But E.ON faced another challenge: a limited L&D team and budget.

“We didn’t have the funds and resources to go out and talk to people face-to-face, so we put together a digital ‘Change Cube Toolkit’ with resources to help with the process – including getAbstract,” Woods says. “We also created a ‘change infographic’ to visualize the change journey. Individuals or line managers could reflect their need for any support to continue their journey. The resources in the toolkit were there to help in each phase.”

They also created a physical cube employees could walk through. The resources and change tools were posted on its walls. getAbstract offered summaries and flyers with reading recommendations about change and coping with change. With this campaign, E.ON focused on the human aspect of change, on helping employees cope with the energy transition and its repercussions.

The Change Cube was a crucial step for E.ON’s development of a new learning culture and getAbstract was a great support. “The ‘Change Cube’ is about learning being owned by the employees instead of by the L&D team,” Woods emphasizes. “Of course, we relied heavily on getAbstract for content.”

The Power of Synergy
The structural changes at E.ON affected every part of the business. getAbstract worked closely with leaders via the Learning team, in almost every department – from HR and L&D to Marketing and Sales – to cater to their teams’ specific needs.

To enhance every employee’s learning experience, E.ON also wanted its learning resources and providers to work together. getAbstract has supported this effort by collaborating with other providers, giving them access to its portal and summaries and organizing webinars to discuss new ways to link content and improve learning experiences.

When talking about getAbstract, Woods has one recommendation for other companies: “Take a look at what you are already doing and embed getAbstract into that rather than using it as a separate add-on. And, of course, get as many people on board as you can – from the very beginning.”

“getAbstract fits with our new learning culture – it’s about those few minutes of learning you regularly fit into your day.”

— Sue Woods, Global Learning Media Expert

CASE STUDY: e.on